Chapter 1 by StoryTime

Jessica is in financial trouble. She lives on the first floor of a rundown apartment in an industrial area. Every once in a while there is warm water. Even electricity is only sporadically available in the apartment. One day her husband Robert who is working in a logistics company has an accident with a forklift.

As he gets fired he is deeply saddened. As a child forklift driver was his dream job. Robert decides to withhold the loss of his job towards his wife Jessica, instead he drags himself through life and travels even during the day from bar to bar to meet old friends, who can divert him from his miserable life, at least temporarily.

Every night when he comes home, he goes through the basement to put on his old work clothes from the company. The jumpsuit is ugly but it is the only choice he has, telling the truth would be even worse.

Jessica works in a Gambling Hall. The work is poorly paid, but she won't get a better job with her qualifications anyway. While Robert pretends her a "normal" life, she toils day and night. Her boss lets her work on a trial basis, so he can pay her less. He also treats her increasingly unjust, abuses her and often drinks alcohol while work.
